Jamal Abed

Jamal Abed is the Director of the Planning and Design Unit of Millennium Development International. Before joining Millennium, Mr. Abed was an Associate Professor and chairman of the Department of Architecture and Design at the American University of Beirut. He obtained a bachelor degree in Architecture from the same university in 1982 and a graduate degree in Urban Design from MIT in 1988. He is an author of a large number of publications and winner of many grants, the most prominent of which is the Fulbright scholarship.

Combining twenty five years of experience in academia and professional service in urban development, Mr. Abed plays an essential role in leading and directing the growing Planning and Design unit team to structure complex development projects, target effective development strategies and, through its management of Consultants of diverse disciplines, to realize them through an integrated design excellence and commercial success. His expertise spans a wide geographic spread and his mark is present on the diverse portfolio of development projects within MDI. Since its beginnings, Mr. Abed has contributed to the growth of the Company and to what it stands for today.
